

Featured Project: Bavarian Playhouse

Written by Fancy Builder

Wednesday, 21 July 2010 17:00

Bavarian Playhouse by Fancy Builder

We've been hard at work finishing up the playhouse for the 2010 Salt Lake Parade of Homes, a Bavarian-inspired playhouse for a lucky 4 year old boy and a 1 year old girl in Herriman, Utah.

When the family contacted Fancy Builder in February, they knew they wanted something fun for the kids but weren't sure if they wanted a fort, a train station, or something more playset-like with swings and a climbing wall. We exchanged emails with photos and brainstormed together. After some time, they decided to go with something whimsical and Bavarian. Something perhaps a gnome could possibly live in. How fun! I drew up some ideas and sent them over.

Drawings for the Bavarian Playhouse

The family LOVED the sketches and had the perfect spot on a hill for the house and its tower to sit on a hill overlooking the valley. They sent over landscaping plans and together, we worked out some finishing touches for the details.

Some of the fun and functional elements added were a sandbox under the tower, a slide coming from the tower, a patio (perfect for little ones to greet tea party attendees), and a flower box to plant with cheerful summer blooms.

Featured Project: Bavarian Playhouse

Written by Fancy Builder

Wednesday, 21 July 2010 17:00

When the construction was complete, the children used the front porch (which was the little of the house) to play.

Door peep-hole

The children were very happy to play in the playhouse and the parents were very happy to see their children playing in the playhouse.

Featured Project: Bavarian Playhouse

Written by Fancy Builder

Wednesday, 21 July 2010 17:00

We finished the playhouse with a final touch, the roof. It's made of real shingles, and it's just what we needed to make it look like a real house.

Kids wave goodbye as we leave